

Yet Atwam Creek Trail (Formerly Squaw Valley Creek)

McCloud Ranger Station - Shasta-Trinity National Forest

What you will find

Yet Atwam Creek is a beautiful stream, lined with deep, sun-dappled pools, boisterous waterfalls, and long rapids. Umbrella plant or Indian Rhubarb grows thickly along the rocky shores shading the water beneath and dark formations of basalt hem the stream and provide spectacular bluffs and obstacles to the water's flow. It flows through a mature mixed conifer forest that includes Douglas fir, Pacific yew, pine and cedar. Black oak, vine maple, and dogwood form the understory and provide brilliant color on brisk autumn days. The ground is moss covered and damp. Wild ginger, iris, wild rose, bleeding hearts and sky rockets grow profusely. You should be alert to poison oak... it grows everywhere along the trail.

The Yet Atwam Creek Trail is an easy hiking trail with lots of level ground and gentle climbs. It is five miles long, the last mile of which is still under construction. The creek only rarely slips from view, and occasionally the trail dips to creek level providing easy access for swimming, picnicking, and fishing for native trout. There are few locations that are suitable for camping along the trail but a good place for a backpacking camp is at the south end. Shortly after beginning your hike down the trail you will come to another trail that joins Yet Atwam Creek from the east via a footbridge. This is the Pacific Crest National Scenic Trail winding its way from the Lower McCloud River to Castle Crags. It and the Yet Atwam Creek Trail run concurrently for a short distance until the PCT forks off and heads uphill. The junction is marked.

As you hike the trail, watch for the tracks of black tailed deer, black bear and other animals. If you are quiet you might be lucky to observe one or more of these animals in the wild. Listen for the chatter of steller's jays, the kakking call of the northern goshawk. Watch for American dipper or ouzel in the stream. In the evening you could hear the hoot of the great horned owl.

How to get there

From Mt. Shasta City, take Interstate 5 south to the junction with Highway 89. From Redding, take Interstate 5 north to the junction with Highway 89. Turn onto Highway 89 and head east to the town of McCloud, a distance of about 13 miles. Turn right at the McCloud central business district, following the signs for Squaw Valley Creek Road and the McCloud Reservoir. Continue south on this road for 6.1 miles. Just past a camping and RV park named "Friday's Retreat," turn right onto Squaw Valley Creek Road. This is a dirt road with a sign saying "Rough Road," but it is easily passable with a highway vehicle. Continue on this road for 3.1 miles. At this point, you will cross over a concrete bridge. The parking lot and trailhead are on the left immediately after you cross the bridge. The trail crosses Cabin Creek a short distance after you leave the trailhead and follows the west side of Yet Atwam Creek. See detailed map on back for more.

United States Department of Agriculture

Forest Service
Pacific Southwest Region
www.fs.fed.us/r5/

Shasta-Trinity National Forest
fs.usda.gov/stnrf

Revised: 4-10

The Yet Atwam Creek Trail

For more information, contact the McCloud Ranger Station at:

P.O. Box 1620
McCloud, CA 96057
(530) 964-2184 (voice)
(530) 964-2692 (TDD)

Partners in this project include:

- California Trout
- Mount Shasta Trail Association

All Are Welcome

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) prohibits discrimination in all its programs and activities on the basis of race, color, national origin, age, disability, and where applicable, sex, marital status, familial status, parental status, religion, sexual orientation, genetic information, political beliefs, reprisal, or because all or part of an individual's income is derived from any public assistance program. (Not all prohibited bases apply to all programs.) Persons with disabilities who require alternative means for communication of program information (Braille, large print, audiotape, etc.) should contact USDA's TARGET Center at (202) 720-2600 (voice and TDD). To file a complaint of discrimination, write to USDA, Director, Office of Civil Rights, 1400 Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20250-9410, or call (800) 795-3272 (voice) or (202) 720-6382 (TDD). USDA is an equal opportunity provider and employer.